Dear MPC,

It is with a sad heart that I report that Mr. Greg Gumbrell passed away Sunday from a heart attack. Greg served our students and campus as a custodian. In this role he helped to create the clean and safe learning environment that MPC is known to provide. Greg was hired in 1997 and served our campus well for many years. Our thoughts are with Greg's loved-ones and his closest colleagues today.

Local colleges should let veterans observe

By Jim Silva, Guest commentary

Tuesday, Nov. 11 is Veterans Day. It falls on the same day every year, the 11th month, the 11th day, at the 11th hour. It is a tradition that has lost its importance to our two local junior colleges, Monterey Peninsula College and Hartnell College. Both schools have many veterans attending classes in their quest for improving their level of education. These are the young men and women who have put their lives on hold to defend our country against both enemies foreign and domestic. They are not forced to serve, they do it of their own free will. Without these courageous young soldiers we wouldn't be enjoying the freedoms we all take for granted.

This is what has happened the past couple of years. Seems like the administrators of both colleges feel it is more important to give the faculty a three-day weekend and require the veterans to attend class on the holiday honoring them and their service to our nation. So on Tuesday, while Veterans Day parades and other special veteran events are being held in our area, those veterans who are taking classes at these two institutions will be there in class and unable to participate in the events planned especially just for them.

There are thousands of veterans in Monterey County. Many served part of their duty at Fort Ord, yet somehow local college administrators decided that being a veteran isn't as important as giving the college staff a three-day weekend. I wonder how many of those administrators are veterans? I wonder if any of them saw their friends seriously wounded, or even worse, killed? I wonder how many stood at memorial services for their fallen comrades? I wonder how many of them stood at attention while taps was being played? I wonder how many of them get a lump in their throat when they hear "The Star Spangled Banner"?

They have already made Memorial Day a three-day weekend for everyone. It was sad when they made that decision also.

Veterans are a very special class of individuals. Especially the ones who are part of our all-volunteer military. No one forced them to serve. They did so of their own free will. Ninety-eight percent of Americans don't even know anyone serving in our current wars, nor do most even care. As everyone goes on their daily routine living in our free nation, maybe they should think, and try to understand, why they are living such a life, and who makes it all possible. I can tell you the answer, the veteran, all those from our past wars, to our current wars. It is also not only the veteran who needs to be honored on that day, but it is their families also. The families of veterans do as much emotional suffering as the veteran themselves.

In this world of political correctness, I guess I should have known that honoring and caring about our brave soldiers would come down to just another day off for non-veterans. Next year the 11th will be on a Wednesday! What decisions will these ungrateful administrators decide when Veterans Day rolls around next year? Let's just wait and see.

Jim Silva served as a sergeant E-5 in the U.S. Army in Vietnam in 1968-69. He lives in Salinas.

Letters: Teacher will miss Dad in Veterans Day parade

I am writing this in support of Jim Silva's commentary, "Local colleges should let veterans observe." I have now taught at MPC for over 49 years and have long deplored the custom of moving such holidays so as to gain a three-day weekend.

We don't dare move the date of Christmas or Fourth of July to the nearest Monday or Friday, so why should we do it to Veterans Day? It is extremely disrespectful both to the memory of those who have served and to those who want to observe the day. All my many veteran students strongly agree.

This year, my college's injudicious decision will affect me very personally. My 100-year-old Dad, Homer Bosserman Jr., a proud Marine vet of WWII, will be in the Veterans Day parade in Salinas on Tuesday. I have a "holiday" Monday but will be unable to attend the parade on Tuesday, Nov. 11, since I have classes all day.
